

Law of Opposites*

If you argue or defend yourself against a criticism that seems totally irrational, wrong, exaggerated, or unfair, you'll instantly prove that the criticism is absolutely valid.

This is a paradox.

If, in contrast, you immediately and genuinely agree that the criticism is valid, you'll instantly put the lie to it.

This is a paradox.

* Copyright © 1980 by David D. Burns, M.D.